

Read and Find

A Tiny Bite

A tiny ant was drinking at a spring. All of a sudden, the ant slipped and fell into the water. As the water swept the ant along, he cried, "Help! I'm drowning!" A dove sitting in a nearby tree heard the ant's cry. The dove looked down and saw the ant's problem. She picked a twig off the tree and dropped it just in front of the ant. "Oh, thank you!" the ant called, as he climbed onto the twig. Some time later, the ant went back to the spring. There was the dove caught in a trap. When the hunter came along to open the trap and catch the dove, the ant bit the hunter on the leg. He bit so hard that hunter dropped the trap and the dove flew free. "Oh, thank you!" the dove called to the ant. The ant smiled. "You helped me and I was pleased to help you."

Common Nouns:

Verbs:

Prepositions:
